1. Presenting Overview Improves Student Performance

Presenter: Uma Banerjee – Washington University in St. Louis (MO)

Summary: My common experience of hearing the negative comments about POGIL methodology from a significant number of students has encouraged me to pursue my approach in leading a POGIL classroom. It is seen in both undergrad level as well as high school level students, after having a little bit of background knowledge about POGIL methodology, students have understood and learned over time how they would engage themselves. A brief training before every session up to 4/5 sessions maximum, students have shown remarkable progress. Students have proven successful in spreading their thoughts/ideas to make their classroom a more and more suitable place for effective learning.
